THE PAPER FOR ALL HACKNEY PEOPLE

Circulated to 108,000 homes and businesses in Hackney

Issue 186 23 June 2008

MONEY TO PLAY WITH

Hackney has won millions to create 26 new play areas in the borough

By
Karyn Michael

OVER £2.5 million has been won in funding to create 26 new play areas across the borough.

The package also includes cash to build a large, supervised, adventure playground. Hackney is one of only 20 local authorities nationwide to secure a slice of a £225 million Government investment programme.

Now residents' views are needed, especially young people's, on where a play area should be created, or how existing ones can be improved. Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "We are delighted to have secured this funding.

"It is important we get involvement from local people as we work in partnership with the Learning Trust to provide our young people with exciting play facilities where they can learn in a safe environment."

Hackney has been awarded £2.7 million, over two years, by the Department of Schools, Children and Families (DCSF) to implement the Play Pathfinder scheme. It allows £20,000 to £50,000 to be spent on developing each play area and will be administered by The Learning Trust. Its Chief Executive, Alan Wood, said: "We want Pathfinder playgrounds to serve the diversity of Hackney communities with exciting, innovative equipment such as sand, water and natural areas for children to relax. You may know of a public space used by all ages which would benefit from adding something for young people to enjoy the space more.

"We'd like local children and communities to get involved in the design and, in some cases, construction of their playgrounds."

Announcing the launch of the programme earlier this year, Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families, Ed Balls, said: "We know from parents and young people that these facilities are something they want and will use. Having the time, space and opportunity to play freely and safely is one of the defining characteristics of a good childhood. Children need places which allow them to meet their friends and have fun – being able to burn off energy in unstructured play is an important part of maintaining a healthy life.

"That is why we're making such a big commitment to invest in outdoor play."

Host borough for 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games

Message from the Mayor

The art of preparing for the future

It was great to see once again just how talented young people are in this part of London when I met students from the five host boroughs who produced the artwork that now covers the Olympic Park hoardings. (See pg5)

Students of all ages and abilities from schools in Hackney, Greenwich, Tower Hamlets, Newham and Waltham Forest, worked on photography, creative writing, collage, model-making, footprints and wheelchair tracks to produce designs that are now proudly displayed around the edge of the Olympic Park site, along the Hackney Wick towpath. Since building work for the 2012 Games will be hidden behind these hoardings, they may often be the backdrop for photographers and TV crews reporting on the Games' progress. This artwork represents hopes, aspirations and enthusiasm, not only for the Games themselves, but more importantly, for their lasting legacy for the East End. Some of the students that took part in this project, and many other talented local young people, will be trying to carve out a career in the arts and creative industries around the time of the 2012 Olympics. The media centres in Hackney Wick, built to house 20,000-plus journalists during the Games, are therefore an ideal opportunity to establish a regional hub for such industries.

I am committed to ensuring that the 2012 Games benefit Hackney residents – this is a great example of the Games giving local young people an opportunity to show their talents to the world.

HUNDREDS of new affordable homes are on the way for Hackney residents looking to rent or buy, thanks to multi-million-pound Government funding.

A grant of £48 million is set to be the first installment of a new programme that will help deliver up to 400 homes in coming years.

Of those for rent, 65 per cent will be family homes, with three or more bedrooms – compared to a London-wide target of 42 per cent.

During the past two years, Hackney has received £153 million from the Housing Corporation – the Government agency that funds new affordable housing – to provide 1,700 homes.

Cllr Jamie Carswell, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: “Hackney has delivered the largest social rented housing programme in the capital for three or more bedrooms, and I am proud that this is set to continue.

“House prices have led to a divide between ‘have nots’ who can’t buy their own home and ‘have lots’ who are a long way up the property ladder.

“We’re not going to solve this overnight, but this scheme is something which could make a difference today, and for future generations in Hackney.”

Residents looking to buy their own home are being invited to apply to a £1 million equity loan scheme. Hackney First Step offers an interest-free loan of up to 30 per cent of the value of a new-build, affordable home, depending on size, on a part-buy, part-rent basis. The scheme is only available to Hackney Homes, and Registered Social Landlord (RSL) tenants, or priority applicants on the Council's

- A household of three or more people (minimum one child) with a combined income of between £33,000 and £38,000.

The interest-free loan is repaid when a homeowner wishes; on selling the property; or when purchasing the remaining part in full. The scheme aims to help between 15 and 30 households during its first year, and is being delivered by the Council in partnership with Team Hackney and Metropolitan Home Ownership.

A star in the dock

"Ben Coulter is kind of an everyman. He's a cynical, ordinary guy who gets caught up in a situation that's extraordinary."

"I've played a lot of troubled or tortured people of one kind or another. Ben is fairly happy-go-lucky, which is kind of what gets him caught up in this situation. It all gets quite miserable very quickly because he gets arrested for killing a girl which he may or may not have done..."

"I haven't seen much of Hackney other than the inside of the Town Hall, which has been lovely. It's a really interesting building and the Council chamber has a lot of history about it."

If you've ever seen the inside of Hackney Town Hall, the courtroom in a gritty new BBC drama may look familiar.

The Council chamber was transformed into a crown court for two weeks in December for crucial scenes from Criminal Justice. Written by the highly acclaimed Peter Moffat – a former barrister – and featuring rising star Ben Whishaw, the series follows the story of carefree 21-year-old Ben Coulter.

Following a drug and drink-fuelled night out, Ben awakes to find a young woman he met the night before stabbed to death in her bed.

Unable to remember what happened, Ben finds himself charged with murder and begins a rollercoaster ride through the criminal justice system.

Kate Harwood, Head of Series & Serials, BBC Drama said: "This is not a prison, legal or police drama. Moffat has created something beyond these labels."

Set to be aired on consecutive nights, the show's cast also includes Pete Postlethwaite, David Harewood, Bill Paterson, Con O'Neill and Lindsay Duncan.

Criminal Justice starts on BBC1, on Monday, 30 June.

Greens slam Mail for Hackney slight

A LEADING environmental group has slammed a national newspaper for wrongly branding a Hackney road rubbish.

The Mail On Sunday had claimed that Southgate Road, N1, was 'the worst street in the country for bin collections'. The paper said this was based on a Friends of the Earth (FotE) survey, but the campaigning group moved quickly to quash the story, which caused outrage amongst residents and Council recycling teams.

A FotE spokesman said: "We have not named Southgate Street as 'the worst', nor have we conducted any relevant surveys or 'named and shamed' any streets."

All the group had done, in fact, was identify the road as having different recycling systems because it straddles two local authority areas (Hackney and Islington).

He added: "We also pointed out that we believe the system used by Hackney, where different recyclable materials are separated at the kerbside, is better than that used by Islington – where all recyclables are collected together. Kerbside separation gives higher quality materials that are more likely to be recycled."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Cannabis factory closed

A MAN who turned his two bedroom Council flat into a cannabis factory faces up to 14 years in prison.

The drug growing operation was closed down in a joint raid by police, Hackney Homes and EDF in Wrens Park Estate on 10 June.

Cannabis plants in the flat

It uncovered hundreds of cannabis plants and growing equipment to support continuous production of the Class C drug in every room.

The tenant had even tampered with the electricity supply to by-pass the main meter to avoid the high costs of powering the factory 24/7. Housing experts said this created 'a significant safety risk' and could have led to a fire breaking out in the block.

Sgt Andy Newman, of Springfield Safer Neighbourhoods Team, said: "This is another example of Hackney police acting to safeguard our community. We are here to improve the quality of life of the local community and these sort of activities will not be tolerated."

"We urge members of the public with further information on this crime, or any other illegal or suspicious activities, to contact Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111."

A 52-year-old man has been arrested on suspicion of cultivating cannabis and abstracting electricity. He has been released on police bail until next month.

Cllr Jamie Carswell, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: "Everyone has the right to feel safe and secure in their own home. We will continue to work with all our partners to make Hackney's estates a better place for residents."

Proceedings have now begun to repossess the property. Hackney Homes chair, Rupert Tyson, added: "It's thanks to the hard work of everyone involved that we will now be able to let this property to a person in genuine need. Let this be a message to anyone considering abusing their tenancy – we will find you."

Team spirit

OVER 250 young people took part in a sports day to promote the message 'teams are better than gangs'.

The event at Millfields Park, E5, aimed to use sport to engage young participants in discussions about gangs, guns and knife crime. Basketball and football sessions with coaches from Leyton Orient Community Sports Programme (LOCSP) were on offer during the day, which was organised by London Community Cricket Association and the police as part of the 'Take Back The Streets – Hackney' campaign. LOCSP Coach Heide said: "There has been a variety of different people here with different abilities. However, everyone participated, there was great communication and everyone got involved." Revellers and performers enjoying the sunshine at Stokefest

By
Karyn Michael

GLORIOUS sunshine drew revellers in their thousands to this year's Stokefest.

The annual fiesta began with a parade led by local schoolchildren playing samba and Brazilian dancers, which made its way from Stoke Newington centre to Clissold Park.

Inside 15,000 party-goers enjoyed live music, DJ sets, dancing and food from around the globe.

The event boasted seven stages featuring popular regulars DJ collective Raison d'Etre; Hackney Globetrotter; Solution Sound and Gladdy Wax reggae sound systems.

A 21st century village green featuring folk dancing with a maypole and live folk, roots and blues also proved a big draw.

“After a long period of rain, people were just dying to come out”

And there was something for youngsters including a child-friendly ‘silent’ disco, storytelling and magic teepee.

The festival almost became a victim of its own success however, when it reached capacity in the afternoon and police closed park entrances for safety reasons.

Programme co-ordinator, Lis Ssenjovu, said: “After a long period of rain, people were just dying to come out. We had to shut the gates when we got too close to the licensable number of 15,000 at any one time. It's the first time we've ever had to do something like that.”

WHEN a big blue wall first went up around the Olympic Park site, it was dubbed an eyesore.

Now thanks to some creative Hackney schoolchildren the offending hoardings have been transformed with colourful artwork.

The eye-catching images along the Hackney Wick towpath were produced by pupils from across the five Olympic host boroughs, including Ickburgh and Downview special schools, William Patten Primary and Cardinal Pole RC School.

Staff from social enterprise Signs Of Life worked with 17 schools across Hackney, Greenwich, Newham, Tower Hamlets and Waltham Forest to get the children thinking creatively about the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

Their artwork was unveiled at a launch attended by Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe;

Olympic triple jump star Jonathan Edwards; and Olympic Delivery Authority chief executive, David Higgins on 10 June.

Mayor Pipe said: "These hoardings are a great way to show how incredibly talented young people from this part of London are."

"In just a few months' time, London becomes the official host for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games and the eyes of the world will be upon us."

"The hoardings will be a media backdrop for reports on the Olympic Park's progress. This artwork will become a recognisable piece of imagery representing our hopes and aspirations not only for the Games themselves, but for their lasting legacy for the East End."

Future travellers celebrate past

By Jane Young

YOUNG travellers from Hackney have taken part in the first celebration of their community's history and culture.

Schools, organisations and individuals around the country arranged events, exhibitions and concerts to celebrate their culture during the inaugural Gypsy Roma Traveller history month, supported by the Department for Children, Schools and Families.

More than 50 young people from Hackney put on a great show featuring singing, dancing and drama.

The event at the Round Chapel, in Powerscroft Road, was also a chance to present young travellers with achievement awards from the Jack Petchey Foundation and Metropolitan Police.

The celebration on 17 June was organised by the Hackney based London Gypsy and Traveller Unit (LGTU), and attended by 150 guests.

Young people from the LGTU's five youth groups, partly funded by Team Hackney, also helped produce an exhibition of photography, films and writings about Traveller history that is due to tour the borough's libraries from the end of this month.

Gracia Douglas

PARKS can be easy to take for granted. After all, they have been there for years – some of them centuries – providing quiet, shady picnic spots, and places to exercise, walk the dog, or simply reflect on life.

Hackney boasts the largest area of green space in inner London, and the Council, together with park user groups, is dedicated to maintaining them to a high standard. Which is why Hackney is about to launch a Parks Strategy, setting out the most important improvements to our green spaces over the next five years.

The aim is to ensure the Borough's parks are real community assets, accessible to everyone.

The strategy for the next two years includes an £8.9 million restoration of Clissold Park and House; an ambitious project to totally transform Shoreditch Park; refurbishment of the White Lodge, stables and glasshouses at Springfield Park; creating a multi-use games area in London Fields; upgrade facilities at Hackney Downs; and a new children's play area at Clapton Common.

Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said:

"This is a very important decision and an exciting period in the development of parks and open spaces.

"The Council is investing more in green spaces than ever before. This Strategy will outline the role and use of Hackney's parks and underlines their importance in the everyday life of local people."

Clissold House in the sunshine

Clissold Park and House

THE £8.9m restoration of Clissold Park and House will return the Grade II* listed building and grounds to its former 19th century glory. But the plan also includes designs for 21st century facilities to meet the needs of modern day visitors.

These include building new play and sports areas; landscaping with improved paths, gates and railings; renovating animal enclosures and extending the New River through the park.

The proposals were the subject of a major public consultation in 2006, and a second round of consultation on Clissold Park and House runs until mid July. Residents' feedback will be used to update the masterplan and refine design proposals for the restoration, which is jointly funded by the Council and Heritage Lottery Fund. Plans will be finalised over the summer.

Landscape architects LDA Design are co-ordinating the overall scheme, working alongside quantity surveyors Jacobs UK and Richard Griffiths Architects. Building work is due to start in 2009 and expected to be completed by 2011. For further information, e-mail: rob.brown@hackney.gov.uk

KEY FACT

Plans include an amphitheatre for performances and events

An impression of what Shoreditch Park could look like after the regeneration is completed

Shoreditch Park

ONE of Hackney's newest green spaces, this area was all terraced streets until the Second World War, when tragically, most of the homes were destroyed by bombing.

After 1945, in response to a nationwide housing shortage, some of the site was used for temporary prefab houses until the area was eventually turned into a park in the 1980s.

Now the Council, in partnership with Shoreditch Trust, is developing a scheme to dramatically redevelop the park.

Proposals include building a park rangers station, cafe, toilets, picnic and BBQ areas, dog free children's play area and open air amphitheatre for events and performances.

The existing sports areas, adventure playground and garden will also be renovated as part of the scheme.

Levitt Bernstein Landscape Architecture drew up a masterplan for the redevelopment, following widespread consultation last summer with residents, the park user group, and local community groups and organisations.

So far, nearly £800,000 is available for the initial works to construct the amphitheatre, turf over a derelict football pitch, build better pathways and entrances, plant new trees and shrubs and maintain existing ones.

Elizabeth Moxon, Park User Group member, said: "It is great to see the progress being made on the redevelopment of Shoreditch Park. The consultation events were inclusive, taking in the views of regular users and the wider community.

"We look forward to continuing to work with the Council and Shoreditch Trust to see the project completed."

The redevelopment will also include the installation of a 100 ton granite boulder from Carnsew Quarry in Cornwall, which as well as being a sculptural centrepiece for the park, can be used to teach young people to climb.

A second boulder is also planned for Mabley Green. They were commissioned by PEER UK, Shoreditch Trust and the Council, with funding from Deutsche Bank and the Recreation and Environment Action Programme (REAP). Ingrid Swenson, Director of PEER said: "I hope the boulders become a significant landmark that engenders a sense of pride for local communities. It would be great for people to take ownership and enjoy them as an integral part of the landscape for years to come."

The first phase of work in Shoreditch Park is due to start this month.

Springfield Park & Spring Hill

CREATED out of the extensive grounds of three mansions in 1905, Springfield Park is one of the most attractive areas of Clapton.

The White House is the only mansion to survive to the present day and currently houses a cafe. The Council has secured funding to renovate the Grade II* listed building and glasshouses and is currently seeking residents' views on proposals.

Further funding is also being secured to develop sports and leisure facilities in the park, and ideas about how to improve them are also being sought.

The public consultation runs until 1 August and will include meet and greet events, and a survey of young people and their views on playgrounds. The results will be published on the Council website. For more information, e-mail:

When every second counts

By
James Willsher

TWENTY years ago four friends decided to become firefighters.

Two decades later, Ray Paul continues to tackle blazes in Hackney.

The 47-year-old is crew manager at Stoke Newington Fire Station, Church Street, and has spent his entire firefighting career in the borough.

He completed a tough 18-week course at the Fire Brigade training centre in Southwark, south London, before being assigned a post at Kingsland Station in 1987.

“I fancied something challenging and rewarding,” Ray said. “Being a London firefighter can be very demanding at times, but I enjoy it and would recommend it to anybody.”

An incident that stands out in his memory is a fire at an old people's home in Middleton Road, E8, in 1998, when 20 people were rescued from a blaze in a dining area. Ray received a letter of congratulations from the regional Chief Fire Officer for his bravery.

He describes Hackney as ‘being a bit run down in those days, but it has been transformed in recent times, with the borough now one of the top places to live.

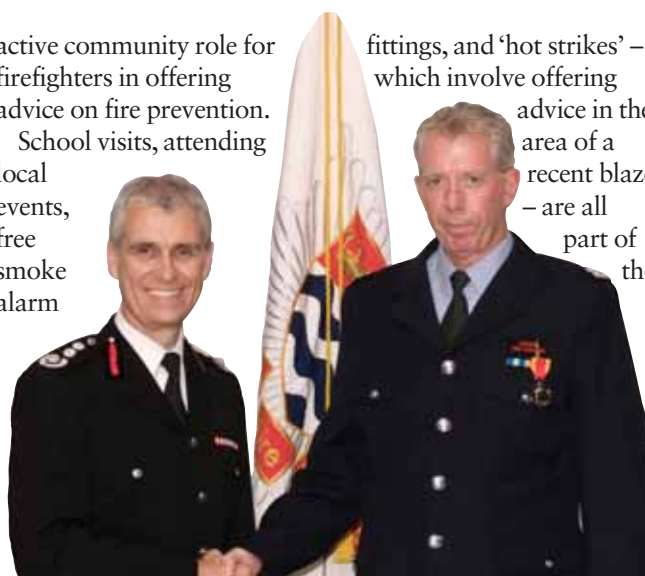

Ray added: “Kingsland Station was one of the busiest when I started. Not now – people are more aware of fire safety, so the message is getting through.”

One of the changes he has seen over the years is a more active community role for firefighters in offering advice on fire prevention.

School visits, attending local events, free smoke alarm fittings, and ‘hot strikes’ – which involve offering advice in the area of a recent blaze – are all part of the work of a 21st-century firefighter. Ray added that due to Stoke Newington Station's central location, families stop by at weekends to see how it's all done, and leave with tips ranging from what to switch off while on holiday, to making an escape plan.

Other preventative work has included a joint initiative with Hackney police and Council to identify and remove abandoned cars, preventing them falling victim to arson attacks.

And it's not only fires that the Brigade is called out to. Ray has helped a man with spinal injuries from a first floor window of a house, and said that calls from people trapped in lifts are also common. This part of the job is called ‘special service’. He added: “Every day is different. It's something you have to think about there and then, and it puts your skills to work.”

Last month Ray – along with Homerton Watch Manager Tim Frost – was awarded a long service and good conduct medal during a ceremony held back where it all started, at the training centre in Southwark.

And the future? Ray has no plans to move on from Hackney. He knows the local knowledge he has built up is of great value in situations when every second counts.

Green day out

By
Annie Gilbert

OVER 3,000 people flocked to a sunny London Fields to enjoy an environmentally themed fun day.

The third annual BeRecreative event featured imaginative activities to engage young and old, plus over 40 stalls and information about everything from cycling and energy efficiency to composting and recycling.

There was plenty to keep youngsters busy, including making musical instruments and toys from junk and recycled materials. One of the most popular areas was the Give or Take pitch, where lots of treasures changed hands, from books to bikes.

Visitors could feast on a great selection of organic food and drink, and even bring their own containers to stock up on nuts and dried food at the Be Unpackaged stand. Others brought their own picnics and relaxed listening to live performances from Hackney bands and musicians.

Jill Hawkin said: "What a great event, it has a real community feel to it. Everyone is having so much fun while learning about environmental issues, a perfect balance. It's just fantastic."

The event on 7 June, held as part of Recycle Now and London Sustainability weeks, was a joint effort between the Council's recycling team and its Green Champions who all put in a huge amount of hard work to make the day possible.

The Champions are a group of residents who volunteer their spare time to spread the green message across the borough.

Champion Beck Dabscheck, said: "It was a fun way to get serious environmental issues across. Everyone got involved in all the different activities while learning about how we can all do our bit to take responsibility for our environment."

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, added: "I'm delighted so many residents visited the BeRecreative event and enjoyed taking part in the activities. Recycling is a priority for the Council. We are committed to improving our local environment."

Carrying a torch for youth

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, joins young athletes training for the London Youth Games in Haggerston Park

“ We can now build on last year’s success and continue to use the Games as an opportunity to inspire more Hackney young people to get involved and benefit from sports and physical activity ”

By Kate Gibney

ATHLETES from Hackney’s London Youth Games team presented the competition torch to Mayor Jules Pipe at a training session in Haggerston Park.

The torch passed through Hackney on 10 June, during a tour of all 32 London boroughs and the City of London.

It will eventually arrive at Crystal Palace National Sports Centre, where the Games’ finals take place on 5 and 6 July. Now in their 31st year, the Games see 25,000 young Londoners, aged seven to 17, take part in 33 different sports, from cycling to athletics and sailing to weight-lifting.

Mayor Pipe said: “The Games are a great opportunity for young people to showcase their talent and enthusiasm. Hackney should be proud of its performances in recent years as our teams continue to achieve ever better results in the face of some tough competition.”

“Last year, the team’s excellent efforts took us up six places in the league table. We can now build on that success and continue to use the Games as an opportunity to inspire more young people in Hackney to get involved and benefit from sports.”

With only four years to go until the Olympic and Paralympic Games, it is hoped that the Youth Games will play a major role in helping aspiring athletes to fulfil their dreams of representing their country on home soil.

Going through a stage

ASPIRING young stage stars have been gaining writing, directing and acting skills as part of a training project at the Hackney Empire.

The two week long Stage Write project gave 16 to 25-year-olds a chance to work with professional artists and then showcase their talents on the stage.

One participant said: “It blew my expectations away. I was really impressed with how much I learnt, and how informative it was.”

Supported by Team Hackney, Stage Write is part of the Ignition programme which gives young people a leg-up in the competitive creative and cultural industries. During the first week of the course, participants wrote short plays in response to the theme of ‘Identity In Hackney’. The second week saw the plays brought to life by young actors and directors, culminating in a weekend of performances in the Empire’s Studio Theatre. Evan Placey, the Empire’s Participation and Learning Coordinator, said: “A big part of training as an artist is learning to work creatively with your fellow artists – and what better way to do that than by working collaboratively on pieces written by your peers.”

CLAPTON Girls' Technology College (GTC) has been rated as 'outstanding' by Ofsted.

The chief inspector from the Government's education watchdog gave the E5 secondary the best grade possible in recognition of its high performance and significant improvement, following a visit in May.

He reported that pupils have been making rapid progress due to the consistently high quality of teaching, and noted that students are rightly proud of the school.

One parent said: "My daughter is very happy about everything in her school and that makes a happy mother as well."

Headteacher, Cheryl Day, said: "I am delighted that the determination, hard work and commitment of Clapton's staff, and the talent and enthusiasm of the students, has been acknowledged by Ofsted.

"Last year's GCSE results were fantastic and we will continue to ensure that Clapton GTC does the best for every girl who is lucky enough to attend."

Stitching up the competition

TWO students from Hackney Community College have scooped a fashion design award.

Nicole Da Silva and Phong Nguyen, otherwise known as The Urbanites, won £450 cash and a sewing machine for the N1 college, in the Ethic 08 competition.

They both took part in a catwalk show and reception at the Fashion and Textile Museum, in SE1, hosted by eco-entrepreneur and TV presenter Joanna Yarrow.

Ten finalists presented their work to a panel of ethical fashion experts from the museum, as well as judges from The Guardian, Eco-Boudoir online boutique, and Sari UK.

Nicole said: "I am so surprised. The standard of all the finalist's costumes was

Nicole Da Silva (third from right) with a model in the outfit she designed with Phong Nguyen and judges incredibly high. Until now there has been little opportunity for fashion students in further education to showcase their work.

"This means so much to me as I am hoping to continue my studies in fashion at university."

Nicole and Phong created a wedding dress by deconstructing and customising an old gown from a charity shop. They screen-printed it with recycling information and embellished the dress with pearls, also found in a charity shop.

The annual Ethic competition features new, up-and-coming talented fashion designers.

Entrants' designs had to combine current trends and style, while also addressing at least one of a number of issues surrounding ethical fashion – Fairtrade, organic materials, recycling, animal friendly or innovative green materials – with a budget of just £100.

Turkish delight

SCHOOLS enjoyed a host of cultural celebrations as part of Hackney's second annual Turkish, Kurdish and Turkish Cypriots (TKC) Week.

Workshops, plays and puppet shows featuring the jokes and tricks of legendary Turkish performer Nasreddin Hodja kept children entertained, as did folk dancing, cookery and storytelling.

The Learning Trust delivered resources to schools, including a pack to help with planning lessons, and a set of Nasreddin Hodja books to mark his 800th birthday.

Hamiyet Asan, the Learning Trust's Ethnic Minority Achievement Consultant, who organised events, said: "The week celebrates the positive contribution, achievements and cultures of TKC pupils and communities.

"We believe it's important to provide opportunities for all pupils to explore how Hackney has been enriched by the immigration of TKC communities to Britain.

"It's also a good opportunity to get Turkish and Kurdish speaking parents involved in organising events at school."

Still Black Still Proud - A James Brown Tribute Barbican Hall, 14 June.

The Barbican was the setting for a thrilling night of funk and frolics as legendary saxophonist Pee Wee Ellis led an all-star tribute to his long time collaborator, James Brown. Proving that good music never dies, celebrated musicians including Senegalese guitarist Cheikh Lo, Afrobeat pioneer Tony Allen and Vieux Farka Toure joined trombonist Fred Wesley and others to salute the Godfather of Soul. And what a night it was! Interspersing traditional African music with Brown's extensive back catalogue, the band – accompanied by singer Fred Ross, vocalist and dancer Wunmi and UK rapper Ty – put in an energetic performance that had the audience dancing in the aisles, bringing the house down with interpretations of classics like I Got You (I Feel Good) and Say It Loud: I'm Black and Proud. But it was Cheikh Lo's hauntingly beautiful rendition of It's A Man's World that was the night's highlight, combining awesome musicianship with Brown's signature showmanship. South African songstress Simphiwe Dana's bluesy homage was also a revelation. With each band member a star in their own right, Still Black, Still Proud was an awe-inspiring evening that's testament not only to Brown's indisputable legacy but also to the rich vein of African musical talent. It may be nearly two years since he passed away but the spirit of James Brown truly lived on in this wonderfully captivating show.

THE MABLEY GREEN BOULDER...

The Boulder, by artist John Frankland, is a public art project commissioned and developed by PEER with the support of Shoreditch Trust, Hackney Council and Core Arts. Standing four metres high and weighing around 100 tonnes, the Cornish granite boulder will be an impressive focal point at the centre of Mabley Green. You can get fit by climbing the Boulder, or you can use it as a landmark for meeting friends.

Survey work and preparation for the Boulder's foundations are due to take place in June with the Boulder due to be in place by July. A second Boulder will be installed in Shoreditch Park, at the same time providing a unique link across east and north Hackney.

MEET THE ARTIST

A QUESTION AND ANSWER SESSION WILL BE TAKING PLACE WITH JOHN FRANKLAND AT THE HACKNEY WICK COMMUNITY CENTRE ON THE 26TH JUNE AT 7:00PM.
THE OLD BATHS, 80 EAST WAY, HACKNEY, LONDON, E9 5JH

FUTURE IDEAS FOR MABLEY GREEN

New ideas for Mabley Green are coming and we want you to be involved. In addition to The Boulder and the ongoing work to improve sports and changing facilities on the Green, we have plans for better play and recreational facilities. Jeffrey and his Training & Development Manager Suzanne Cantelo show off a plaque celebrating his successful work placement

Give a guy a break

By Siobhan Silbert

EMPLOYMENT was the focus of this year's national Learning Disability Week organised by leading charity Mencap.

Running from 15 to 21 June, it highlighted the fact that people with learning disabilities still face huge barriers when trying to break into the job market.

Locally, Hackney Recruitment Partnership (HRP) actively supports people who want to find work that utilises their skills and experience.

It offers job-matching, CV and interview preparation services, as well as ongoing support and guidance.

Jeffrey, 42, is one of its success stories. He contacted HRP in 2006, when despite 15 years experience, he was finding it hard to get work. After applying for 141 jobs and attending 11 unsuccessful interviews he was left feeling 'down' about the situation.

Jeffrey persevered, however, and this February, with HRP's support, got a three month work trial at Queen Mary College, part of the University of London.

His Training and Development Manager, Suzanne Cantelo, was so impressed by his contribution that she offered him a permanent position and he has been going from strength to strength in his new role since April.

Suzanne said: "It has been wonderful to witness Jeffrey's development over the past three months. We are delighted that he's moved into permanent employment."

"Jeffrey has a strong sense of work ethics with a professional attitude and approach and is proving to be a strong team player."

"We have already discussed his professional development and it is hoped that over the next year he will work towards an NVQ qualification."

Jeffrey's colleagues even held a champagne reception at the college to celebrate his achievement.

He recently visited HRP to update them on his progress – saying he loves his job, has made new friends and is proud to be able to contribute financially to his household.

There are many more people with learning disabilities living in the borough who would love to have similar opportunities.

Help on the end of the line

By James Willsher

CARERS in Hackney can call on support in the form of a new local helpline.

Residents who provide unpaid care for a friend, relative or neighbour can get advice and information thanks to the pilot scheme, launched on 19 June.

Council customer services officers have been trained to sensitively deal with carers who ring the helpline with a range of issues, including questions about what services are available, and how to apply for the Hackney Carers Card and carers' assessment.

Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "Hackney is committed to improving services for carers, and to valuing their role in our community."

The Council launched its Carers Strategy last June, which includes a discount card for shops and leisure centres; respite breaks; benefits advice; information packs; and free training and courses.

Last week, the Government announced a new national strategy that will make more money available to councils to support carers over the next decade.

Still not conforming

By Sally England

STOKE Newington has long been home to liberal minded, independent thinkers from anti-slavery Abolitionists to the founding father of the prison reform movement.

But it is a little known fact that London's oldest place of non-conformist worship sits quietly at the corner of Newington Green.

One of the most historic small buildings in Hackney, Newington Green Unitarian Chapel celebrates its 300th anniversary in July.

It is still in use by a diverse community of worshippers who don't define themselves by a single faith.

Although built in 1708, the Grade II listed building's roots lie further back when the 1689 Act of Toleration granted freedom of worship to non-conformist groups. At Newington Green an ejected clergyman held services in private houses from 1665 to 1685, and worship was established.

One of the earliest surviving documents relating to the chapel is a bond by Richard Lyford to Rebecca Harrison for 'quiet enjoyment' of a copyhold tenement, dated 15 November 1693. Rebecca's son Edward, a Presbyterian, built the chapel on this site in 1708. He then leased the building to two members of the congregation, a Mr Morton and Mr Mason.

At the end of the 1700s, the chapel became home to Unitarian worshippers, but in the early 1800s trouble surfaced when James Gilchrist abandoned Unitarianism, but not his position as minister.

Eventually one of the congregation, Charles Kinder, led an opposition movement which resulted in Gilchrist's resignation in 1828. But he was followed by four ministers in quick succession and the congregation dwindled.

In 1838, a new minister, Thomas Cromwell, arrived. A period of great activity ensued during his 26 years at the chapel. Many documents at the Archives date from this time, including minutes of the chapel committee and papers relating to the Sunday school, domestic mission, savings bank and conversation society.

During Cromwell's ministry the chapel was enlarged and refronted, with a school at the rear and an apse with a pulpit added to the main chapel – works that are remembered in a panel above the door.

Who's inside?

The chapel houses monuments to a number of notable non-conformists.

Poet Samuel Rogers (1763-1855)

was as much known for his kindness to friends as his writing.

Anna Laetitia Barbauld (1743-1825) was an innovative children's author and role-model for women's involvement in politics.

Dr Richard Price (1723-1791) served as afternoon preacher from 1758 to 1783.

He was also a philosopher, financial adviser to Prime Minister William Pitt the Elder, and friend to great names of the American Revolution, including Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson.

“Hackney has been held back for too long”

An artist's impression of how Shoreditch High Street Station could look from Bethnal Green Road

On track for rail link

By
Gabriel Harriss

HERE is a first peek at how Shoreditch High Street Overground station might look by 2010.

The state-of-the-art development will be part of the East London Line (ELL) extension project – which will give Hackney a 21st century connection to the Tube network.

The platforms for the two level station will be above ground, with tracks running across the former Bishopsgate Goods Yard site and a recently installed bridge across Shoreditch High Street.

The ELL project will create four new Hackney stations at Dalston Junction, Haggerston, Hoxton and Shoreditch High Street. Transport for London closed the line in December for major work to extend it north to Dalston Junction, and south to Crystal Palace and West Croydon, as part of the London Overground network.

If everything goes to plan, the extended East London Line will be further extended to Highbury & Islington in time for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

The new stations are the culmination of a campaign by Hackney's Mayor, Jules Pipe, to secure better public transport for the borough.

He said: “Hackney has been held back for too long by being the only inner London borough without a proper Tube link.

“The new stations on the ELL show our campaign to get Hackney fully on every Tube map has been on the right track.”

On diversion

MAJOR roadworks in Dalston are planned by Transport for London this summer to allow the extension of the East London Line to Highbury and Islington.

A section of Dalston Lane, which runs above the new line, is actually a Victorian road bridge and needs to be replaced.

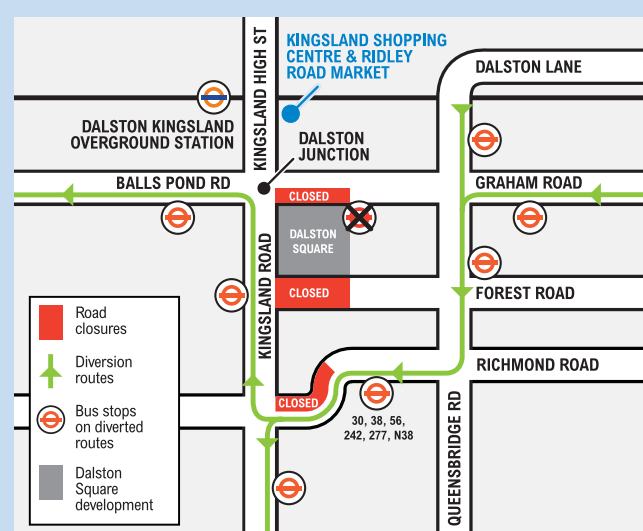

As Hackney Today went to press, TfL had not confirmed its plans. But it is likely Dalston Lane will close to all westbound traffic (towards Islington).

To keep disruption to a minimum, TfL may keep one eastbound lane open at all times between Kingsland High Street and Beechwood Road.

Westbound traffic would be diverted along Queensbridge Road, then on to Richmond and Kingsland roads. All cyclists travelling west would use the same diversion. Bus numbers 30, 38, 56, 242, 277, and N38 would also be diverted along this route.

Eastbound traffic would travel up Kingsland Road and turn right into Dalston Lane. Dates for the diversion are due to be confirmed in the next week and should be available in the next issue of Hackney Today.

The Council is working with TfL to try to minimise disruption to residents, and is urging TfL to finalise plans and communicate them with residents.

Motorists and bus passengers using this route are advised to allow an extra 20 minutes for their journeys. Avoid using Dalston Lane as a through route, and use the TfL planner to find alternatives.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Cycling to school's cool

PUPILS can jump up a gear after the expansion of a cycling project to Hackney.

Bike It is a nationwide scheme, managed by sustainable transport charity Sustrans. It supports children who want to cycle to school, highlighting the benefits of riding, organising training, and helping youngsters to plan safe routes to school.

Wheely good idea

Schools across the country have seen levels of cycling treble within a year. Holly Brunford, a Sustrans biking officer said: “The response so far has been brilliant. On the first ever Bike To School day at Whitmore Primary, in N1, we got 85 cyclists, which is a tremendous achievement. “I expect to be working with over 1,000 children across three Hackney schools.”

Two wheels good for capital

FIGURES released during national Bike Week have revealed that over half a million cycle journeys are made in the capital each day.

This is a 91 per cent increase in London since 2000 and a 30 per cent rise since August 2005. TfL is investing £55 million in cycling this year, a 10-fold increase on the £5.5 million spent in 2000. The money will be spent on improved bike parking facilities, education, events and cycle promotion.

Peter Hendy, Commissioner of Transport for London, said: “Despite one of the wettest summers on record, Londoners’ passion for cycling continues to grow. A 91 per cent growth in cycling levels in just eight years is a great achievement, but we are working to build on this steady growth and improve conditions for cyclists still further.”

Crackdown on cab assaults

LONDON'S illegal taxi trade is facing a crackdown under new proposals which aim to make getting a taxi safer.

The plans will double the number of cab enforcement officers and introduce a ‘one strike’ rule for cabbies convicted of touting, which will mean their license is revoked.

In the past year, nearly 1,200 arrests were made for illegal touting.

In 2006, there were 119 assaults and serious assaults involving illegal taxis.

About two women every week become victims of assault by unlicensed cab drivers, figures suggest.

Mayor of London, Boris Johnson, said: “We want to make sure that women who need to use a cab late at night can hire one in complete confidence that they will not face the threat of any kind of sexual assault.”

Stay safe with a licensed cab

HERE is another in our series of recipes courtesy of the Hoxton Apprentice restaurant, chosen by one of their successful trainees.

Sophia first came to Training For Life in 2003 on a personal development programme for homeless clients. She was struggling as a lone parent and living in a hostel. Sophia also had difficulty gaining employment with little experience and qualifications. In 2004, she was accepted on to the Hoxton Apprentice programme. The confidence and support she gained enabled her to develop quickly, and she was employed as waitress at the Apprentice on graduation, soon progressing to senior waitress. In 2005, she was able to move out of the hostel. Sophia has now taken her career further with a move to a senior waitress role at a private members club in Central London.

Greener business

DO you run a business in Hackney? The Council is currently looking for opinions from business owners on recycling in the borough.

At the moment, businesses can benefit from glass collections, but must use private companies to recycle other types of waste. The results of this survey will tell us the most practical way to help businesses recycle more and reduce the amount of waste sent to landfill.

How can businesses be helped to recycle more of their waste? Tell the Council your views

All businesses that respond will be entered in a prize draw for £50 Marks and Spencers vouchers. The survey takes no longer than 10 minutes. Simply click the link at: www.hackney.gov.uk/commercialwaste

Volunteer your views

THERE is still time to win a digital camera or £50 in high street vouchers by taking part in our short volunteering survey. The Council is working with partners to develop a strategy to support volunteers and wants to find out more about how people give their time to work for good causes in the borough. Complete the short online survey by visiting: www.consultationfinder.com/hackney

Youth centres

WIN an iPod shuffle and grab some free pizza at a series of youth consultation events.

The Council is planning to build four new youth centres or 'hubs' across the borough that will offer a range of services that are currently not available in one place.

If you are aged 13 to 19 and live in Hackney why not find out more and have your say on the project? There will be four open days on:

- Tues, 24 June; 6.30-8pm, Forest Road Children & Young People's Centre, Forest Road, E8
- Thurs, 26 June; 6.30-8pm, Parkside Youth Club, Woodberry Grove, N4
- Weds, 9 July; 6-7.30pm, Pedro Youth Club, 175 Rushmore Rd, E5
- Fri, 11 July; 6.30-8pm, Milton Gardens Estate Community Centre, Shakespeare Walk, N16

Proposed parking controls in roads surrounding Controlled Parking Zone N (Homerton and Lower Clapton)

We are currently consulting residents in roads surrounding Controlled Parking Zone N on the proposed introduction of parking controls. The roads included in the consultation are Glyn Road, Rushmore Road, Chatsworth Road and Elderfield Road.

If you live or operate a business within the affected area you should have by now received a consultation letter and questionnaire. If you have not received a letter please call 020 8356 8877 to be sent a copy.

For more information and a downloadable copy of the consultation letter please refer to our website: www.hackney.gov.uk/parking

Please remember to have your say by:
15 August 2008

During the consultation we are seeking your views on:

- The introduction of parking controls in your street.
- Your views on the proposed design of the parking controls (if the majority of respondents support its introduction)

You can also have your say by:

Email: consultparking@hackney.gov.uk Phone: 020 8356 8877

Attending one of our drop in sessions:

Match Day Parking Scheme Implementation

The Match Day Parking Scheme implementation is now scheduled to take place in August 2008.

If you live or work in Controlled Parking Zones G, G2 and Zone M (roads west of Milton Grove) you will by now have received an updated summary booklet which explains the changes to be made and revised dates of implementation. If you have not received a booklet please call 020 8356 8877 to be sent a copy.

- The match day scheme will operate as an extension to your CPZ and is intended to prevent stadium visitors from parking in designated resident and business bays during Arsenal home fixtures.
- To ensure that parking controls are seamless and there is no gap between the two types of restrictions, the Match Day Scheme will begin when your normal CPZ hours end. Therefore the Match Day Scheme start time will differ for each zone
- After the Scheme's first year of operation we will carry out a public review to ensure that it is meeting the needs of local residents and businesses.

Key Implementation Dates

Subject to weather conditions, implementation is planned as follows:
August 2008 – start the changes to signs and post works.

For more information please refer to our website: www.hackney.gov.uk/parking or you can contact us by: Email: consultparking@hackney.gov.uk Phone: 020 8356 8877

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2006.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

Please note: some councillors do not hold surgeries during the school Easter and summer holidays.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm
